

Early today at Panmunjom the negotiators signed a prisoner exchange agreement which points to an armistice and the end of fighting in the Korean war.

Whether it will be a permanent peace is open to doubt. As I write this President Syngman Rhee of the Republic of South Korea remains unconvinced and defiant, asserting that before he agrees to any proposition which leaves North and South Korea divided the ROKs will carry on the war alone. The permanent peace in the Orient may be doubtful but not because of Rhee's foolish statement.

Korea was a divided nation to begin with, and the occasion of our troops having to go over there was to stop the Russians and Chinese from unifying the country under the Communist regime of North Korea. Now Rhee would write into our contract something that also spells aggression — unifying the peninsula under the regime of South Korea.

President Eisenhower has already told the ROK chieftain he is wasting his time arguing this particular point with us.

We have enough trouble ahead of us in Asia without being bogged by the nationalist ambition of one small country, especially when you recall that the whole of Korea had been overrun and occupied by Japan a full generation before being liberated as a mere detail of World War II.

The larger issue in Asia is this: Will Russia, having failed to conquer the Korean peninsula, pull in her horns with the signing of this prospective truce, or will she use it simply as a "breather" to allow her to mount new expeditionary forces in other troubled spots? Indo-China is one of the places we are thinking of, but the list is endless.

The end of any war is cause for rejoicing; but no American can say in his heart that a Korean truce has settled anything, or relieved us of the necessity of maintaining top-notch military forces to keep the peace and protect our own shores — until time has given a definite pattern to the thinking of the new regime in Moscow, where the ultimate decision for peace or war rests.

Court Rules in Favor of Insurance Co.

By LEON HATCH
LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Supreme Court, handing down its second decision in the case, today held that an insurance company does not have to pay for death of a horse purchased for $50 and insured by the owner for $1,000.

John H. Stucker sued Hartford Accident and Indemnity Co., in Phillips Circuit Court on a policy covering the life of the horse. Stucker said that the horse was injured so severely by bolting against its stall on May 14, 1951, that it had to be killed on July 16, 1951.

The trial judge instructed a verdict in favor of the insurance company. However, the Supreme Court a year ago sent the case back for a new trial on a technicality.

The second trial again resulted in an instructed verdict holding that the insurance company was not liable because terms of the policy had not been followed.

This time the Supreme Court upheld the lower court's verdict. The policy which said the company would not be responsible for death of an animal which was destroyed except under certain restricted conditions.

It also said that it had refused

Hobbs Grocery Reopens as a Cash Store

Hobbs Grocery & Market, 217 S. Main st., doing a credit and delivery business at the same stand for 20 years, has remodeled and reopened for business as a cash-and-carry store, G. A. Hobbs announced today.

In his statement to customers Mr. Hobbs said:

"For more years than I like to remember, I have operated a credit and delivery store, with the consequent high prices which of necessity go hand in hand with that type of business. "Times change and one must change with them or be left behind. The trend is definitely toward the more economical cash and carry operation, with its lower overhead. No credit losses, for you to pay; no truck insurance, upkeep and depreciation, less book-keeping and many other expenses which can be eliminated or curtailed. "We are reopening with a complete line of foods priced to save you money."

Wilson Terms Airforce Best Despite Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Defense Wilson said today the United States will continue to have the "best air force" in the world despite controversial cut-backs in the Air Force budget.

Wilson told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee headed by Sen. Ferguson (R-Mich.):

"I assure you x x x most emphatically that we are not going to have the second-best air force. x x x We are going to continue to have the best air force."

Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, outgoing Air Force chief of staff, spent three days before Ferguson's subcommittee last week assailing a five billion dollar cut the Eisenhower administration has made in the Air Force budget recommended last January by former President Truman. Vandenberg indicated it would produce only a "second-best" air force.

Wilson testified at a televised public hearing.

He told the senators he was not the first secretary of defense "that has had to hold down the extravagant expenditures proposed by a military department."

Wilson said there has been "waste and inefficiency" in the armed services and promised to cut this to a minimum.

The Truman Air Force budget called for new appropriations of 16 billion dollars and a December, 1955, target of 143 wings — 30 to 75 planes per wing.

The new budget reduced the appropriation request by five billions and set a December, 1955, target of 120 wings, with from 110 to 114 "combat ready" wings by July, 1954.

Ferguson, without elaboration, said yesterday that "figures will come out" today to show the Air Force will have ample funds to pay for whatever equipment can be produced for it during the year.

Quizzed by a CBS television panel, the senator contended Wilson's statements have generally been misunderstood.

London Is Still Laughing at Coronation Tidbits — The Gent From Borneo Was Regretful

By HAL BOYLE
LONDON (AP) — Notes by another innocent abroad:

London is still laughing at this coronation tidbit:

Guests at a garden party were puzzled by a short dark man whose hair hung halfway down his back and was curled at the ends. None could figure what part of the British Empire he was from.

Finally, the little man courteously explained he was a Dyak chieftain from Borneo.

"Are you pure descent?" one guest asked. The small man shook his curls in mock sadness and replied:

"No, I regret to say. Unfortunately, one of my grandfathers ate an Englishman, and therefore I am of mixed blood."

Fathers Can Be Punished in Child Cases

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Supreme Court said today that circuit courts have authority to punish defendants for child abandonment even in cases where chancellors also have jurisdiction.

The court upheld Desha Circuit Court in ordering Noel Guyot, a student at the University of Cincinnati, to pay $15 a month to support his small child.

The payments were ordered under Act 67 of 1951 which provides that such orders may be made instead sentencing defendants to jail or fining them. Such orders may be made for a period not to exceed one year.

Attorneys for Guyot contended that the act did not apply in his case because the Desha Chancery Court previously had taken jurisdiction when it granted a divorce to Guyot and gave custody of the small child to Guyot's former wife.

The Supreme Court said the Chancery Court still could enforce its orders by contempt of court citations, but that the circuit Court also had jurisdiction under Act 67.

Nine Enemy Planes Bomb Seoul Today

By WILLIAM C. BARNARD
SEOUL (AP) — Nine Communist planes bombed Seoul tonight in the biggest Red raid of the war, narrowly missing President Syngman Rhee's residence, killing two persons and injuring eight others.

One of the eight injured was an American, Michael Roulier, Life photographer, who was cut by flying glass when one of four 250 pound bombs that hit the capital struck near the Eighth Army press billets. Other bombs hit an air field near Seoul.

The raiders swept in low and laid their first bomb 1,000 feet from Rhee's residence while the capital's lights still blazed. Rhee was unhurt and unharmed.

The city was then blacked out, anti-aircraft guns opened up, but

President May Intervene for Profits Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey said today chances are "very good" that Congress will extend the excess profits tax on business for six months as President Eisenhower has asked.

Humphrey's apparent optimism was not widely shared on Capitol Hill, where it appeared that nothing short of strong personal intervention by the President would save him from a likely political defeat on the issue.

Nearly three weeks have elapsed since the President asked for extension of the levy, which he contended is a bad tax, but there has been no evidence progress in the House Ways and Means Committee which continues hearings today.

Its chairman, Rep. Daniel Red (R-NY), has insisted repeatedly his committee will not clear the extension. Administration lieutenants have voiced confidence the House and Senate will approve the extension if it comes up for debate but they have done no more than hope the ways and means committee will clear it.

Tomorrow, Red's committee is scheduled to act on an extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act. The chairman agreed to call the session to order announced yesterday.

Only after receiving "airtight" assurance of the hile House from the Senate and the House leadership that they will oppose any attempt which might be made to amend trade agreement legislation with an extension of the discriminatory and unfair excess profits tax.

The Reciprocal Trade Act, which gives the President authority to negotiate lower tariffs on foreign goods coming into the U. S. in return for trade concessions to the U. S., is due to expire Friday.

The excess profits tax is scheduled to die June 30, three weeks from tomorrow. Eisenhower, in asking its extension, said the government needs the 800 million dollars involved. Red not only wants it to expire on schedule, but to move up from Jan. 1 to July 1 a scheduled 10 per cent reduction in personal income taxes.

ROME, Italy — First fragmentary returns from Italy's crucial parliamentary elections tonight showed Premier Alcide De Gasperi's pro-American alliance of center parties running ahead of its Communist and neo-Fascists opposition.

The first 2,268 votes counted of an anticipated total of 28,000,000 gave De Gasperi's coalition government 52.16 percent of the popular vote.

The four-party Democratic alliance needs just over 50 percent of the popular vote to remain in power and clinch the 64 percent of the 590 chamber of deputies seats which go to the winning combination under Italy's new election law.

Indications of a record turnout of voters boosted the government's hopes for victory.

There were no major disorders, but Interior Minister Mario Cella charged Communist rowdies with conducting organized "hunts" to prevent Roman Catholic nuns from voting. He said the Reds tried to bully the nuns out of voting or challenged their credentials.

More than 20 million persons, about 70 per cent of Italy's 30,348,780 eligible voters, balloted yesterday.

Young Escapees Are Retaken

PINE BLUFF (AP) — Two escapees from a Louisiana reformatory were captured in a running gun battle near here today, after they had eluded police in a wild 150-mile chase.

Eugene Sinek, 15, was shot in the leg by Deputy Sheriff Sam Bradley and J. O. Schratz five miles south of here.

The officers said they began chasing Sinek and Kirby McDowell, 17, near the city and fired into the car when the youths refused to stop.

When awakened at his home early today with news that true negotiators had signed a prisoner repatriation agreement, Pearson said he had no immediate comment but "might have something to say later in the day."

Truce Is Expected at Any Time; Despite Warning Koreans Give Notice Terms Not Acceptable

By BILL SHINN

SEOUL (AP) — South Korea gave notice today it intends to continue the Korean War despite an urgent message from President Eisenhower that the U. N. and the war-torn republic are "required" to accept a truce on present terms.

South Korean President Syngman Rhee told Associated Press photographer Fred Waters "the Korean people will pay no attention" to an impending armistice.

And his Cabinet and National Assembly crisis committee, meeting behind locked doors resolved to continue the fighting and not recognize any truce under present terms.

The defiant South Korean opposition burst out anew shortly after U. N. and Communist negotiators at Panmunjom edged close to a full armistice by finally agreeing on exchange of war prisoners, the last major hurdle before a truce.

Rhee told Waters:

"Our boys are fighting the Communists on the front, and now they want to open the back door and let the Communists in that way. I am being criticized by everyone — except the Korean people."

A few hours earlier Rhee said he had not decided whether to accept offers in a letter from Eisenhower or economic aid and a military armistice. The Reds released this.

UN Anxiously Awaits Cease Fire Signal

By BRUCE W. MUNN

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., (UP) — United Nations diplomats waited anxiously today for the cease-fire in Korea that will signal the beginning of political negotiations which may lead to peace in the troubled Far East.

With final agreement on a truce at Panmunjom, action in the long-standing Korean dispute will shift from the battlefield to the conference table. Preparations already were under way to put U. N. machinery in motion as soon as an armistice is signed.

Lester B. Pearson of Canada, president of the U. N. General Assembly, sent word from Ottawa that he was ready to call a meeting of the assembly "if and when" the truce is completed.

When awakened at his home early today with news that true negotiators had signed a prisoner repatriation agreement, Pearson said he had no immediate comment but "might have something to say later in the day."

U. S. Leaders Hopeful for Swift Peace

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — U. S. officials said today that final agreement on the prisoner of war issue should lead quickly to a truce in Korea. But they were gravely concerned whether South Korea would observe a cease-fire.

First reaction of those officials who have been closely identified with armistice negotiations was that word of the signing of the POW agreement constituted "as one informant said, 'the most encouraging news we have had in some time.'"

"It allows us to hope that at long last this collective action by the United Nations will result in restoration of peace to Korea," added this informant, asking "not to be named."

State Department officials said any detailed formal comment from government leaders here would come only after reports had been received from Gen. Mark Clark, the U. N. commander there was no immediate comment from the White House.

Dr. You Chan Yang, the Korean ambassador, was not reached but an aide said he would have no comment until a previously scheduled news conference at the embassy later in the day.

and security pact after a truce. The Cabinet and the crisis committee planned to return to Pusan, wartime capital, to lay their cards before the Assembly.

Meanwhile, Rhee issued a "statement to the people" warning against any violence or "unpleasant talk" against U. N. personnel.

The United Nations proposal for a "peace plan" Rhee's state said, "contains points that we cannot accept and both the government and the general public of this country are united in their effort to reject it. Under these circumstances there is a strong possibility of spontaneous demonstrations and popular campaigns against the United Nations' move."

Rhee also cautioned that ROK soldiers must be extremely careful not to use improper words or actions toward or committed against the military or civilians of the allies.

"We should not forget that we owe them much. They provided us with valuable assistance when we needed it most."

She carried pink carnations.

U. S. Leaders

Wade Han, embassy counselor. "As far as the Korean people are concerned they cannot accept any truce permitting the Communist Chinese aggressor to remain in the northern half of our country."

Concern over what the South Koreans will do arises from the fact that their government leaders in the last few days have bitterly criticized the truce terms and threatened to go on fighting for Korean unification.

President Eisenhower Saturday offered South Korean President Syngman Rhee, in a personal message, a mutual defense pact with the United States. Rhee had requested such a treaty to "protect South Korea after an armistice."

But he had coupled with this a demand that such a treaty should be followed by withdrawal of Communist and U.N. forces from Korea. Officials here interpreted his demands as meaning that he wanted a free hand for future military action with a guarantee of American support in case he ran into trouble.

These officials said that Eisenhower's message, while promising a defense pact, should leave no doubt in Rhee's mind that the U.S. would not sign a blank check covering what they think he has in mind.

They hope, however, that the promise of the pact underwriting South Korea's security would prove sufficient to persuade Rhee to go along with a truce, however much he and his associates may dislike its terms.

notice, is expected to simply "take note" of the truce agreement and then recess.

Then the general assembly is expected to meet and begin the difficult task of setting up the Far Eastern political conference which is provided for in the truce agreement as a means of handling still unsettled problems affecting Korea and other areas.

In most quarters it was believed the general assembly would meet within two weeks of the official notification that an armistice has been signed. But there also was speculation that the assembly would delay its session until after the forthcoming Big Three conference in Bermuda.

something besides that for the people to feed on.

The average Englishman, likes the average American, when he gets to know him. But he has an unshakable conviction that any American government is just a schoolboy when it comes to world politics, and that such matters are far too deep for any mind born outside Britain.

The Englishman in the street also enjoys an absolute and profound ignorance of American geography. If he has a friend in Los Angeles, and you come from Milwaukee, he can't quite understand why you don't know his friend, too. He has a vague fear you are pulling his leg.

An unexpected burst of sunny weather has stirred a new interest in love, a subject which most British feel can best be safely left to poetry. A debate is going on in the press over which men make the best lovers.

The Irish have been getting quite a few votes, but here is the way two girls from Coventry summed it up in a letter to a newspaper: "Greatest lovers, the Irish? We think they are rough brutes."

"The few Americans we have sampled were terrific. They were generous, very attentive and considerate."

"Englishmen are nicely mannered, rather mean with their money, and much too fond of beer."

"Well, you can't argue with ladies and in this case who wants to?"

DOROTHY DIX

His Business Friends

Dear Miss Dix: My husband's employment requires him to be away from home most of the time. I am unable to go with him since our child is in school. This aspect of our difficulty is a great problem in itself, but I have managed to solve many of its complications. However, my real trouble is that Roger travels with a group of four men, of whose actors in general I do not approve. Two of them drink quite heavily, two of them are single, therefore free to seek feminine companionship on these trips. I'm afraid Roger might be tempted to carry the business of their association too far. Practically everything these men do is against everything in which I believe. So far, none of Roger's good has rubbed off on them and, although I do trust my husband, I am afraid some of these "bad" may be transferred to him.

GLORIA D.

Acutely Anxious
Answer: Your letter, which I had to shorten somewhat, shows many signs of acute anxiety, most of them concerning matters which absolutely cannot be altered, and all showing lamentable lack of confidence in Roger. The only perfect solution would be for your husband to find work closer to home, and this, I gather, is impracticable. Have you ever stopped to realize that he might have just the same sort of worry about you? A young, attractive woman, about most of the time, might be easily tempted, too. Of course, he realizes that you are a person of exceptionally high moral standards, and he can put his faith in you. You have, for your part, the knowledge that Roger is a man of fine character, impeccable reputation, with good sense and taste. These should be enough to hold your confidence. Since he can't choose his traveling companions, there's nothing concrete you can do about his situation. Build up your faith in him and confidence in yourself.

For a self-addressed stamped envelope I'll gladly send you a list of books that may bolster your morale, and help overcome your tendency to worry.

Dear Miss Dix: Recently I met a boy just a week before he was to leave for Florida (he's in the service). In that week he showed a lot of interest in me. I haven't heard from him since he went away; now he's due to return home, and I'm worried whether he will call or come to see me.

MISS S.

Answer: You may be presuming too much on such short acquaintance. If he cared for you, he would probably have written. However, he might just need a reminder, such as seeing you again would provide. Just look for the best, but don't pin too much hope on the young man.

Dear Miss Dix: Though I'm only 18, I'm considered quite mature for my age. At my place of employment I met a man of 24. He was once engaged but it didn't work out. We went out together a few times, and became mutually attached. Recently, he was transferred some distance away. Before going, he asked me to marry him, but I didn't take him seriously. I suggested that we correspond, but have never heard from him. He came back last week end, and though he made a date with me, he didn't keep it. When he went back, I wrote, asking whether he was still interested in me or not. No answer! Now he's coming home again, and though I am still interested in him, I plan to avoid him. Do you think this would be the best thing to do?

JOAN
Answer: At 18, and mature for your age at that, you should learn how to handle problems better than running away from them. Perhaps your young man is interested only when you're available, or perhaps he has found a new heart-throb at his present place of business. It will be impossible for you to avoid him altogether, since you live in the same town and know the same people. Why not be more casual about the whole thing? Be gracious when you meet him, make no effort to pin him down to a declaration of love, or promise of marriage, and, above all, no nagging about his failure to write. Let him set the pace from then on.

Dear Miss Dix: I have been going with a girl for several months. I am going into service next month and asked her to become engaged and wear my ring, or better still marry me now. She's in the tenth grade. However, she wants to wait until she finishes school. I feel hurt about her not even wanting to become engaged. Answer: The girl, young as she is, is much more sensible than you are. She is too young to be tied down to an absent fiance, and her education should be completed before she marries. Don't hurt her concern is as much for you as herself.

Legion Nine Seeks Fifth Win Tonight

Hope will play host tonight to another and perhaps the most powerful team from Texarkana, the Red River sides who topped the league last season.

The locals will be seeking their fifth straight league win in as many tries. They currently are heading the league. Reeder Huddleston will take the mound to night for Hope while Dave Pierce will hurl for the visitors.

Last weekend's victory over the Texarkana 1927 team was Donz Stevens' second in a row against the locals. He allowed only six hits, while Hope sluggers banged out 15 hits including home runs by Jack Bell and Bob White.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK

The most amazing baseball town in the country today, not excepting Milwaukee, is Crowley, La. (pop. 12,700), a member of the Class C Evangeline League down in the Rice Belt. The citizens of Crowley seem not to be in a private mood, but one in which the fans themselves are the owners. Miller Baseball, Inc., is a corporation in which there are some 400 stockholders composed of fans from all over the Parish (county). The organization sold some $40,000 worth of stock at $25 per share.

"After two seasons in the Gulf Coast League they entered the Evangeline in '51 and finished 5th. They were in a fight for the top spot in the standing when their fine young center fielder, Andy Strong, was struck by lightning during a game at Alexandria and killed instantly. The Millers fattened after that. Last year they topped the league with an 81-50 record.

"The board of directors in composed of 21 men—doctors, lawyers, farmers, millers, merchants—who make the policy of the club. Their committees handle all of the club's business, including player deals, with advice from their player-manager, Tony York. The only hired help besides the players and manager is a bookkeeper to keep them on the right side of Uncle Sam.

"Miller officials do a fine job of promotion with auto giveaways, nights, clowns, ladies nights, kids nights. In the latter, businessmen pay a cut-rate admission price for every school child who enters the park. Last time over 1,000 kids attended. With all this, the Crowley Millers holl along to another great season."

Big Bill Tilden Dies in California

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The sports world pays final tribute Wednesday to Big Bill Tilden, the greatest tennis player of them all.

Tilden, 60, died Friday from a heart attack. In his day he won all the top international tennis honors and dominated the American courts more than a decade.

Yanks Extend Lead in the American

The American League is beginning to level off and as the New York Yankees today took a casual glance behind, who was galloping along in second place but their old friends, the Cleveland Indians?

First the Chicago White Sox constituted the big challenge. Then the Washington Senators made threatening gestures. Even the Boston Red Sox were considered.

All found their level, and that left only the Tribe to prevent the Yanks from walking away with the pennant.

The only trouble with the Indians is that they have an alarming tendency to fold in the stretch and play dead when they go up against the Yanks. In 1951, for example, the Yanks won 15 and lost only seven to the Indians.

Last year, Cleveland made a better fight of it and the Bronx Bombers' margin was only 12-10. So far this season, the Yanks have won three and lost none against the Indians, who still are 5½ games off the pace.

The Indians will have a good opportunity to make up some ground this week and when they invade Yankee Stadium for a four-game set. Conversely, it will provide the Yanks with a good opportunity to all but sew up the pennant.

Manager Al Lopez of Cleveland can see one bright ray through the clouds. He probably will have Bob Feller, who until yesterday had not won a game in more than a month, available. If Feller can start winning, the Indians have a chance.

Feller pitched a nice six-hitter yesterday in the opener of a doubleheader against Philadelphia. The Indians won it, 8-4, by scoring five runs in the fourth inning, then went on to take the nightcap, 4-3, with Early Wynn. Dave Hoskins and Bob Lemon handling the mound chores.

But the two victories netted the Indians exactly nothing because the Yanks also won a doubleheader from the St. Louis Browns, 9-2 and 7-2. The second game triumph was the Yanks' 11th in a row and marked their longest winning streak under Casey Stengel.

Neither victory came easily, though. In the first game, Eddie Lopat and Dick Littlefield were locked in 2-2 tie going into the seventh. The Yanks sent seven runners across the plate and that was the game. In the nightcap, the New Yorkers were behind, 2-0, until the sixth when they shelled Harry Brecheen from the mound with seven runs. Whitey Ford was the winner, although Allie Reynolds came on in the sixth.

The Senators and the White Sox, who are in the midst of a battle for third place, split a doubleheader. The Nats expanded all their power in the first game and piled up a 16-2 margin to enable Bob Porterfield to coast to the victory. But in the nightcap, Harry Dorch posted a 5-1 triumph for Paul Richards' crew.

The Detroit Tigers, as usual, lost. The Red Sox bent them, 4-1. Skiny Brown went the distance for the winners and helped his own cause with a home run.

In the National League, the Milwaukee Braves and the Brooklyn Dodgers continued their neck-and-neck battle for first place, and today it is the Braves' turn to occupy the top rung. They won two games from the Philadelphia Phillies, 6-0, and 5-3. The Braves took a single game, swamping the St. Louis Cardinals, 10-1.

The Milwaukee triumphs dropped the Phillies 4½ games in back in third place. Johnny Antonelli, backed by home runs by Sid Gordon, Andy Pafko, Eddie Mathews and Ebbin St. Clair, held the Phils to only five hits.

Don Liddle started the second game for the Braves, but Bob Uecker took over in the fifth and got credit for the victory. The Braves pulled it out with three runs in the seventh.

Carl Erskine yielded only four hits in the Dodgers' clobbering of the Cards. He probably could have given up another dozen without being in danger. Gil Hodges, who seems to have snapped out of his

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

I BROWN read the sheet of blue paper, looked up, read it again, cleared his throat, and again that what he had to say was going to be difficult.

"Mrs. Redding... Miss Walton..." He looked from one to the other. "We must all try to be brave."

Carlotta closed her eyes for a moment, then faced him steadily. "Read it to us," she demanded.

Brown still hesitated.

"I think you may as well," said Randolph.

Brown cleared his throat again. "I just can't face it, the police and all. Of course I did it. He threatened to expose me, and make me poor. I was afraid of that. I had a gun and threw it overboard afterwards. But Todd saw it. I was hunting the will when the captain caught me, and had to get away. I didn't want to hurt him. By the time you read this, I will be over the side. Now you know everything, and you can go home, goodbye."

"Oh no, it can't be true. He hasn't... he wouldn't... You will have to find him..."

She half rose from her chair, her hand at her throat, her eyes staring blindly. Then she pitched forward. There were no hysterics this time. She had fainted.

After Gay had been revived and Dr. Randolph and Macbeth had taken her to her cabin, Lisa, Brown, Carlotta, and I sat on numbly. Todd had disappeared. This new disaster forced us into a consciousness of misery, and nobody felt like breaking away.

I had asked Brown to let me see Larry's note, and I sat reading it over and over. The more I read it, the more I thought that there was something very queer about it, and at last I decided to speak up.

"Did you notice he spoke of throwing his gun overboard? Yet, Mr. Brown, you said you found a gun on the deck and pitched it overboard?"

"Yes, Larry must have forgotten that," Carlotta murmured. "He wasn't very bright."

"What do you make of it?" I asked.

Brown looked at me gravely. "It could mean that Redding was making a false confession. It could mean that the real murderer was still on board."

Carlotta appeared suddenly to remember that she was the widow. She gave a choking sob, pressed her handkerchief to her eyes. "I can't bear to think of him," she said, as she groped her way out of the room.

Lisa Tremaine looked as though her disapproval of everything and everybody had reached a point where it was no longer bearable.

"I shall take a bit of a lie-down," she said. "We might ask that doctor for sleeping pills all around. I am sure he has plenty."

I couldn't talk any more. It seemed to me that the time had come for me to go into action. I left her there with Brown, and made my way to the promenade deck.

One question kept churning around in my mind. Why had Todd appeared so terrified when he discovered that Larry had jumped overboard? It had seemed to suck the courage and the cockiness right out of him, and he was like a different person when he came back from his unsuccessful search.

When I stepped outside, I noticed that the ship had slowed down so much that it could barely be held into the waves. Although the storm itself was over, the sea was still so disturbed that only a sea gull could have been happy on the spray-washed decks. I made my way to the bridge, and found it in charge of a sulky lieutenant, who informed me that the captain was personally conducting the party looking over the Spiritus for Mr. Redding. That was all he could tell me, nor would he comment on it, or on anything else.

"I'm on my way down to deck B, looking for a gun," I said.

"I had to," he said.

In the little writing room, I saw Brown, sitting alone, and he got up and came toward me. He wanted me to know, he said, that he was convinced of Robert's innocence as I was, and that he would do anything he could to help me. I asked him what he thought he could do, and he said, frankly nothing, at the moment, but he was sure it would work out.

I left him, and went down to deck C. The ship was turning slowly. Evidently the search on board for poor Larry had been unsuccessful, and now the formality of looking for him in the troubled water was being carried out. If he had jumped during the storm, as we supposed, this was a sheer waste of effort. The wide and aimless circling added the last touch of horror to the heavy afternoon.

I crossed the afterwell deck, and went in to the "black gang" quarters under the poop. I was aware of a large, semidark space with berths around it, and from the berths the flash of several sets of white teeth. I held the door open, and felt my heart knocking.

"Can anyone tell me the way to the brig?" There was no need to tell them why I wanted it. I felt sure that by the grapevine they knew.

A wisened little fellow, whom I had never seen before, shuffled forward and offered to guide me. I followed him gladly.

He led me to one of the heaviest steel doors I ever saw. The heat was terrible, and what with the water and the closeness of the air, and the worry as to what was happening to Robert behind that awful door, I felt myself becoming weak. I gulped my way back up the ladder, and out into the fresher air before the dining salon. There I bumped into Todd.

Agreeability at all costs seemed to be his new role, for he twisted his ratty face into a smile.

"Meggie and me was wondering, 'm'lady, would you join us in a cup of tea? You being American and all that."

I hesitated, feeling more miserable than I can ever remember being before or since, but I accepted.

We went into the salon, and Todd, who moved stealthily no matter what he was doing, slid open the panel. Through it I saw Macbeth in the galley take off a steaming kettle and fill a brown earthenware teapot on a tray already laid. She pushed it through to Todd, then came around and plumped down complacently at the big mahogany table.

"This is honey, I must say," Macbeth remarked to us.

She was on her third strong cup before she began to let me see why they had invited me. She gave me a smile as ingratiating as a mouse-trap.

"Tammie and me was thinking, 'm'lady, you knew more than you was telling."

A shiver of apprehension ran over me. "What makes you think so?"

"Well now, you heard the poor master talking at the rail the night he was done in, and you ran up the first lady on deck afterwards. Then Tammie saw you under the window at that she-devil, excuse the word, Mrs. Redding. We thought you might be snooping, like."

"I don't snoop," I said, with a frozen dignity. "I don't know anything. I wish I did."

Todd was searching my face with his shifty eyes. "No offense meant, I'm sure. We've all got a duty to snoop, and see justice done."

"I want to find the murderer," I said. "I've got to find him."

"That's just it!" Macbeth exclaimed triumphantly.

Todd leaned forward insinuatingly.

"We don't think it was his lordship. I can tell you that. Suppose I was to tell you that I could get him out? Suppose I knew where the key was kept, and suppose I had a duplicate for me and Meggie, just in case."

"I will be grateful if you can help me," I said.

"It might cost a good deal of money," Todd said.

With all my heart I wanted to give him a poke in the jaw, but Robert would have been proud of the way I controlled myself.

"I have no money, as you very well know. But I have a diamond pin. It is the only jewelry they would let me take out except my engagement ring. If you will really get him out and bring him to me safely I will give you that."

"It's a deal," Todd said, and winked at me.

I declined a second cup of tea abruptly, and made for the door. They were still drinking when I left them.

Says Imports to Govern Farm Prices

By WILLIAM M. BATES

WASHINGTON (UP) — Chairman George D. Aiken of the Senate Agriculture Committee said today the United States must have "strict regulation" of farm imports if it maintains high price support levels.

His Vermont Republican said many foreign countries would like to "dump" surplus farm commodities on the U. S. market to take advantage of higher prices resulting from our price support program and to build up their dollar supply.

He told a reporter that six weeks of hearings by his committee on farm import and export problems showed a clear need "for regulation of imports and regulation and cooperation in world trade."

Aiken said the hearings indicated that the world market for farm products has reached the "saturation" point. He said most producing countries are faced with a problem of huge surpluses.

"I was convinced before the hearings began that we need strict regulation of imports if we are to maintain high support prices," Aiken said. "Nothing developed in the hearings to change my mind about this."

Aiken's remarks came amid reports that a move may be made in the house to renew a section of the defense production act requiring the secretary of agriculture to limit imports on certain commodities, including dairy products, for they hurt U. S. producers.

German Sentenced on Spying Charge

WASHINGTON (UP) — Otto Verber and Kurt Ponger, Austrian-born former GIs who became members of a Russian spy ring, were sentenced to prison today but received less than the maximum.

U. S. District Judge Alexander Holtzoff sentenced Verber to 40 months to 10 years in prison and Ponger to five to 15 years.

In fixing the sentences the judge accepted a recommendation by government counsel, who spoke for Attorney General Brownell.

Verber, 31, and Ponger, 39, pleaded guilty in mid-April to different counts of a two-count indictment linking them to a spy

Ten Hurt in Small Sunday Tornado

ARCADIA, Neb., (AP) — A tornado whipped out a farm near Arcadia late yesterday and brought in death to 10 persons enjoying a Sunday family reunion there.

The twister was one of at least 10 which hopped over wide areas of the central United States, destroyed communications lines and downed and several persons were injured, at least one of them seriously. The tornadoes largely bypassed towns and cities.

In this Central Nebraska area, the tornado hit at least six farms. The deaths were on the Madsen farm five miles east of Arcadia. Assembled for their customary Sunday get-together were the Madsens, three children and five grandchildren.

They apparently were in the house and never knew what hit them.

About 4 million acres of 17 per cent of all crops in the United States were bred artificially in 1952.

Four Die in Accidents in Arkansas

By The Associated Press

Weekend accidents killed four Arkansians — two by drowning and two in traffic accidents.

At Little Rock yesterday, an 11-year-old boy drowned when he tried to save two companions caught in the current at a stone jetty in the Arkansas River.

Firemen recovered the body of Joseph Benito Trujillo about three hours after he went under. The two other boys, Dennis, 7, and Bernice Cox, 11, escaped.

A youth, identified by coroner Dr. Howard A. Dismore as Walter Highfill, about 21, of Watten, saw, Jefferson County, drowned at Windy Beach about six miles from Little Rock. His body was recovered two minutes after he disappeared.

A Magnolia child, 2½-year-old James Mienard Harbour, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Harbour, was killed near Haynesville, La., yesterday, when he was hit by a car as he ran out from behind a parked truck.

A coroner's jury ruled the child died as a result of an unavoidable accident. The driver of the car was identified as A. L. Humphrey, a Magnolia minister on his way to church services in Haynesville.

Economic Council Is Well Divided

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON, (AP) — The title itself — Council of Economic Advisers to the President — sounds like Operation Icebox. It raises a vision of men aloof from ordinary feelings that they no longer converse, but exchange ideas in the frigid language of arithmetic: plus and minus.

But the original three-man council under former President Truman had the usual human difficulties: differences in opinions and tactics. And the public knew about the differences, which is more than it may be able to learn about the kind of council President Eisenhower has in mind.

Congress created the council in 1946, giving the three men a full-time job of watching the economy and advising the President on policies for keeping the country prosperous. The act establishing the council said it should have a chairman and vice chairman.

The first chairman was Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, who described himself as a "liberal" with both feet on the ground. Vice chairman was Leon K. Keyserling, who came into the government with the Roosevelt New Deal. The third man was John D. Clark. All were appointed by Truman.

When they sent their recommendations to the President, and disagreed, they could say so. This was a public document. And they disagreed in more ways than one.

Keyserling, for instance, thought the council members should testify before congressional committees in support of Truman programs.

Nourse thought the council should stay clear of such entanglements.

Nourse resigned in 1949 and Keyserling headed the council until the end of the Truman administration.

It may have been due to the confusion of settling down in a new job but when Eisenhower first took over he seemed all for getting rid of the council. He sacked its professional tariff.

Congress acted more than willing to go along by cutting off money for the council.

Eisenhower picked Dr. Arthur F. Burns, former Columbia University professor of economics, to be his economic adviser. Eisenhower then told Congress he wanted to receive the three-man council, with all new members, of course.

Burns seems the likely man for chairman. But Eisenhower said he wants no vice chairman. He said he wants the chairman to report to the President.

Does this mean the other two council members can't even sign the report or express publicly any differences of view? Inside the administration it was said this is a question to be answered later.

A rule of public silence on the other two council members might have the effect of turning the council into one chairman with two assistants under his thumb. This would be the reverse of what Nourse had. There is no doubt Eisenhower wants the chairman to be boss.

In fact, he gave the chairman two hats because, actually, it seems, Eisenhower wants not one but two groups of economic advisers to the council, he said he also wants this.

An advisory board on economic growth and stability made up of the heads of several government departments and agencies, or their representatives. And the President announced that the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers also will be chairman of the advisory board.

The President at the same time outlined a powerful role for the dual chairman. He would not only report to the President on the recommendations of the council but on the recommendations of the board too.

Since the thinking of the council might not always coincide with the thinking of the board, the chairman might sometimes find himself in a dilemma. But inside the administration it was hopefully suggested this kind of problem could be avoided by amicable agreement among all concerned.

The idea of the board really formalizes what was done without title by the old council whose members consulted regularly, in making up their recommendations, with the heads of the various agencies dealing in economic problems.
